

UWEG Tank Cleaning: Terms & Conditions

1. Scope

UWEG carries out the tank cleaning based on its corporate technical know-how, according to the written information provided on the order form with regard to type, extent and cleaning requirements. Particular instructions are to be given in writing and will be carried out at the client's risk. UWEG takes no responsibility for anything other than the correct cleaning process.

2. Disclaimer

UWEG cannot be held responsible for residue-free cleaning of tank parts, drains, hoses, pipes, etc. which are not visible. UWEG will not assume liability for any subsequent damage to products which were loaded after cleaning, caused by any cleaning deficiency.

3. Deficiencies

The client's employee (usually the driver) is obliged to write down any deficiency right after termination of the cleaning process in the designated paragraph of the cleaning certificate. With his signature the customer confirms that the final inspection resulted in no objections.

Claims which arise at a later date and have not been noted immediately after cleaning on the cleaning certificate – irrespective of the legal grounds – will not be considered.

The liability of UWEG due to wilful action or gross negligence remains unaffected.

4. Damage

The customer will be available for all damage or loss on the UWEG premises incurred by its employees, vehicles and items to be cleaned. The customer is particularly liable for all damage or loss suffered by UWEG based on false information (e.g. concerning the previously loaded product.) or by non-disclosure of relevant information.

5. Final inspection

The final inspection includes inert tank surface, manhole lid, manhole box, valves, valve boxes, drain boxes, drain tubes and removal of product adherances. All items are – as far as visible – clean. The driver has to convince himself, that the tank has been cleaned properly and confirms this with his signature on the cleaning certificate.
